Death Note Drabble 4

by LycorisAlbiflora

Category: Death Note
Genre: Spiritual
Language: English
Status: Completed
Published: 2016-04-22 12:28:37
Updated: 2016-04-22 12:28:37
Packaged: 2016-04-27 12:29:43
Rating: T
Chapters: 1
Words: 278
Publisher: www.fanfiction.net
Summary: Most people think that people with high intelligence are obviously atheist, Mello dislikes this mentality.

Death Note Drabble 4

Most people think that people with high intelligence are obviously atheist, no way someone so smart could truly believe in something so childish; Mello really fucking hated this mentality â€“ as if someone with not even one tenth of his IQ had the right to have opinions on anything, let alone on what beliefs he should have. Near was guilty of this the most, not that the twerp would ever voice such opinions â€“or any personal view points for that matterâ€“ but Mello could see the way he looked at his rosary; as if to say 'Have you ever heard of this thing called evaluation' or 'I bet you believe in reptilians too', judgmental asshole that he is, not that anyone took Mellos word for it.

It's not as if Mello doesn't see the irrationally that comes with religion, he is fucking brilliant after all, obviously he realized it was illogical. He often feels conflicted, sometimes God was the only thing that mattered; the hours he spent praying, kneeling on the floor, begging for forgiveness for those he killed; it was all that kept him from falling to pieces under the weight of his actions. Other times he found all of it laughable, so absurd that anyone so divine could let such atrocities happen, why should he apologize for doing what it takes to beat Near meanwhile Kira gets to do whatever the fuck he wants. Either way as illogical as it was Mello found himself needing religion, if he didn't believe in something more than himself he feared he would become like Near, someone unable to envision anything more to life than facts and statistics.

End
file.